Subject: Fwd: Why no night visual impact?

First, congratulations on the exhaustive and meticulous work in the draft EIR/EIS. I have so far read only the executive summary, and dipped into various other sections. However I have been through the entire D visual impact section, and I can find no reference to the impact the red lights on top of the 160/140foot towers will have on viewing of the desert sky at night.

If I am correct, and this has been overlooked can it please be included in the final version? Many thanks

Further to my e-mail I was told at today's workshop that there is no evaluation in the DRAFT EIR/EIS of the effect of red lights atop the 200 foot (160ft) towers in the park (ABDSP)

Please in the final state where new hazard lights would have to be installed on towers - thus irreparably impacting the desert sky at night.

To forestall endless litigation, would it not be prudent for CPUC to delay its decision until after the 2008 presidential election so that a new administration can be left to interpret the ENERGY POLICY ACT?
