Subject: PI	OP question

Hello there,
I have two questions.
1. As I understand a large customer gets re-classified as a medium customer if usage capacity drops below 200 kw for three consecutive months. If that's the case then potentially if I'm a large customer beginning May 1st and I have defaulted into PDP what happens in August assuming that I have dropped my capacity below 200kw and a PDP event is called - do I get dropped of PDP and back to TOU? also, I thought small and medium have a flat rate, so no TOU and no PDP for me?
With regard to customers that we reference as being "reclassified" for PDP during our weekly conference calls with you, we are referring to customers who have yet to default (or affirm) to PDP. Once customers are officially billed on the PDP rate, we do not plan to monitor their demand level to reassess eligibility on the rate. In turn, once they are confirmed on the rate, they will not be "dropped" from PDP if their demand falls below 200kw. Rather(regardless of usage), all confirmed PDP customers will be offered the same options regarding their participation on the rate: 1) continue on the rate, 2) receive bill stabilization up to the initial 12 months on the rate, or 3) opt out of the rate.
2. Dec semi-annual report - Am I understanding correctly that for the Dec semi-annual report PG&E will give us a list of Chambers and list of potential trade journals that you'll work with to outreach to small and medium customers?
Yes, we will provide a list of potential third parties and trade journals that we are considering as part of our SMB outreach in the December semi-annual report. We look forward to thoughts and feedback regarding the proposed list, which will help inform a final list that we will share in 2011.
thanks,
marzia
