Subject: Letter

We have been running around like clowns on the letter. Up until a few minutes ago, our plan was to get you the information on Monday regarding the Top 100 and details on what has happened the last three years with Line 132. We were going to ask for more time on providing you the Top 100 counter-parts for 2007 and 2008 because we only have technical lists and not much more information. That said, on Monday you'd have a description of the Top 100 lines segments, some detail surrounding their length and location and a status column (replaced; repaired; monitoring; et al). Our GovRel people were also in conversations with the governor's office to get them to send us a similar letter. A few minutes ago, I was told that Peter does not want to provide the Top 100 to the public because he thinks it will create more panic than good and that people will misinterpret that. He plans on calling Mike. You can imagine what Tom and I think about that. We push and got run over.
