PG&E says San Jose has 2 high-risk gas pipelines

By Associated Pres

September 20, 2010

Pacific Gas & Electric is preparing to release a list of 100 high-risk natural gas line segments and San Jose leaders have already been told two of those lines are in the north part of the city.

PG&E also says Milpitas also has two pipelines of concern.

The California Public Utilities Commission asked PG&E for the list, which could be released as early as Monday. The San Jose Mercury-News says the utility informed San Jose on Sunday about the two lines under the San Francisco Bay Area's largest city.
