

Diversifying California's Green Economy

5.32 is the next job bank . . . but are all our communities and entrepreneurs ready to take advantage of this opportunity?

A Forum hosted by Greenlining Institute

CPUC Commissioner Nancy E. Ryan

	Agenda
	Welcome Remarks Nancy E. Ryan, Commissioner, CPUC Orson Aguilar, Executive Director, Greenlining Institute
	AB22 and its economic impact on California's recovery Mary Nichols, Chairman, California Air Resources Board Michael R. Peevey, President, CPUC
	Panel discussions between representatives of diverse communities and clean tech companies: Empowering our entrepreneurs and diversifying the California job market through AB 32
	<ul> <li>Rhonda Mills – S. California Program Director, Center for Energy Efficiency and Renewable Technologies</li> <li>Billy Owens – Senior Director of Project Development, Solar Millennium</li> <li>Jonathan Port – ŒO, PermaCity Solar</li> <li>Jay Zoellner – President and ŒO, EPS Corp</li> <li>Raquel Pinderhughes – Professor of Urban Studies &amp; Planning at SFSU</li> <li>Sal Vaca – Director, RichmondWORKS</li> <li>Vivian Chang – Executive Director, Green For All</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>How will implementation of AB 32 help the promise of "green jobs" become a reality?</li> </ul>
<ul> <li>To what exter – particularly</li> </ul>	t is the clean tech sector engaged in efforts to keep jobs in manufacturing – within the US? Within California? keep the supply chain within California, where possible?
Which clean t diversity prog	ech companies currently have effective supplier rams?
• What impedin in the clean te	nents or disincentives to supplier diversity currently exist ech sector?
	e could utility supplier diversity goals have on the clean suppliers to the utilities?
AB 32's oppor
	Closing Remarks Commissioner Ryan and Orson Aguilar