Should be the usual suspects. Roscow & crew (I always think of the Dukes of Hazard when I say that). Possibly a couple from Ryan's office. Gurbux. Me. 3 – 4 others give or take. I anticipate the conversation will be driven by a couple of us with the rest being observers.

Matthew --

All systems go for 4Nov on this end. It looks like Steve Malnight will not be joining us, but we will be about five. Do you have an idea of how many are coming from your end? Is it the usual suspects?

yours,

Sid,

Attached is the draft agenda for the meeting scheduled for November 4 @ 1 pm.

For the question: "How many different rate/pricing options do you have for each class of customer," I have no desire to discuss in detail the answer. What I am looking for is a spreadsheet or some other written document that lists each rate/tariff, separated out by customer class, and, if possible, the number of customers that have subscribed to that option.
