Just to be clear, he was skeptical about offering the opt out itself, and how. Would be good to have a substantive discussion with him, if you can do it without invoking some kind of ex parte reporting. I'm not sure where this would stand, procedurally. If it's easier, I can be the intermediary to avoid your needing to file something saying you went to talk to Peevey about smart meter opt out options...

Well, an application it shall be then. I've got internal parties on board grudgingly and it might be best to let sleeping dogs lie.

About our conversation. He suggests you schedule a meeting with him and me sometime next week to talk through the options. He seemed more skeptical than me, for the record!
