Subject: Tomorrow's workshop in A.08-07-021

ALJ Gamson -- TURN and DRA have been discussing tomorrow's workshop. We believe that it might help the workshop be more productive if the participants have certain baseline information, and we're hopeful that such information can be provided by either the utilities or other participants even on such short notice. Here are the things we've identified so far. The first pertains to the non-DEER workpapers issues, and the other three pertain to customized projects:

DRA and TURN's joint comments on the PD and Alternate contended at page 5 that the Utilities' non-DEER workpapers relied on 1) studies from the early 2000's to support installation rates for CFLs, rather than using the results of the 2006-2008 Upstream Lighting Evaluation, 2) 1999 data to support hours-of-use values for CFLs, and 3) 2002 data to support savings claimed from cooking equipment. It would be helpful to confirm whether or not these allegations are correct in their characterization of the Utilities' non-DEER workpapers.

For each utility, what percentage of portfolio energy savings for 2010-2012 is represented by customized measures?

For each utility, for both the ED-proposed benchmarks for customized measures (250,000 kWhr, 200 kW, 10,000 therms) and the utility-proposed benchmarks (500,000, 400, and 20,000, respectively), how many of the customized measures would exceed the benchmark? It would help to know both the number of customers and accounts that would exceed the benchmark, and the percentage of energy savings as compared to the total expected savings from the customized measures.

Under current practices, what information does each utility provide to customers or third parties that the utility is working with for customized measures about the review of the proposed energy efficiency project and the role of the Energy Division in that review process?

We look forward to seeing you tomorrow.

Bob Finkelstein, TURN
Diana Lee, for DRA
