

New technologies and applications may cycle between Product Engineering and Commercial Introduction several times until the correct mix of features, performance, price, availability, etc. are reached. Degree of failures and risk are high.