Subject: Search for Senior Gas Executive

Fellow Employees:

This week PG&E will announce the launch of a global search to fill a vital new role we are creating within the utility's leadership team at the senior vice president level.

The person selected for this new position will initially be dedicated to leading our efforts to address the gas operations issues we're currently facing related to the San Bruno accident. The person will help us focus on gas records systems, operating pressure decisions, testing needs and other issues related to our desire to assure our customers and ourselves of the safety of our natural gas system.

Adding this resource to our team will deepen the gas operations talent and knowledge we already have within our senior ranks at a time when our highest priority must be on continuing to take steps to ensure the safety and integrity of our system. In keeping with our strong emphasis on leadership within PG&E, the search for candidates will focus on executives with a proven track record leading an operational unit at the senior level, extensive senior-level gas industry experience and expertise in state-of-the-art pipeline operations.

Critically important is that this will also enable our senior operations team to devote more of their time and attention back to ensuring that our day-to-day gas and electric operations are performing at the highest level and delivering for our customers. Accordingly, this new senior vice president will report directly to me.

Our goal will be to bring this new team member on board as soon as possible once we have completed an exhaustive search for the best candidate.

I look forward to sharing more information with you in the near future.

Chris
