Excellent. Good feedback, we'll work on an agenda. Thanks, Michelle.

Can you draft an agenda? To the extent possible, it would be best (in my opinion) to have more independent experts (i.e., non PG&E employees, even if the experts are under contract to PG&E), like Kiefner, someone from one of the testing firms you will be using, someone from the State Fire Marshall's Office, etc. What do you think? Is this feasible? This is the opportunity to get the Commissioners behind the hydrotesting concept and that is less likely to happen if there is the perception that PG&E is the one conveying all the information.

5/6 looks like the date. I've reserved the auditorium. Still working on time.
