Red Bluff Daily News, June 11, 2011

Pacific Gas and Electric Company (PG&E) will host a SmartMeter Educational Center from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. on Wednesday, June 15, at Home Depot in Red Bluff.

Customers with questions about PG&E's SmartMeter program can come to SmartMeter Educational Center being held at the entrance of Home Depot at 2650 Main St., Red Bluff.

PG&E will have a SmartMeter expert available for customers to speak with individually. Customers can drop in anytime during the educational center hours to ask questions one-on-one.

The SmartMeter program provides customers with more information about their energy usage and more rate options to help them reduce their energy use and bills. SmartMeter technology will also help the state meet its renewable energy goals and provide the foundation for a future smart grid which will make the power grid more reliable, efficient and sustainable.
