Subject: Re: PG&E Gas and CAISO Coordination- urgent, please call

We had some good clarification and discussions w/ the ISO today. Those are going to continue but we're thinking it probably makes sense to have a short discussion later this week on this with you, PG&E and the ISO so you are clear on what kind of information the ISO is asking for, what the rules allow, and what kinds of solutions we are discussing with them. I'll give you a call tomorrow to discuss. In the meantime, however, rest assured that we continue to have our daily calls with the ISO and those discussions are consistent with CPUC rules re: customer-specific information sharing.

On another topic, did you have a chance to look at the draft generic hydrotesting letter? Any feedback?

Hope to talk tomorrow,
Trina

Michelle,

Thanks for getting back to me. As we discussed, this requires our joint, immediate attention.

Below is the communication we have received. I understand that PG&E has indicated a willingness to continue our daily coordination calls through Monday morning. We are pursuing other channels with PG&E, as well. Thanks for your help.

Duke and All,

I was incorrect in my assumption below. The restriction applies to real-time operational communications as well.

The same restriction applies to real-time operator communications, Mary. Please clarify that point with your CAISO friends. Thanks.

Subject: PG&E Gas and CAISO Coordination

Duke and Rod,

I wanted to follow up my phone conversation with Rod this morning with a note. Per recent counsel from our attorneys, I have a new appreciation for and understanding of, some pertinent CPUC rulings and corporate guidelines that will prohibit me sharing further details regarding power plant gas service outages with CAISO. Unless I have specific documented releases from each power plant customer to share details of their operations (including outages) with CAISO, I will not be able to share that information with your team. At present, I do not have such documented permissions. Therefore, I can no longer provide CAISO with the dis-aggregated information you have previously requested.

I encourage your team to continue to use the public information found at PGE.com and our Pipe Ranger website portal to assess the electric power system impacts of our various gas transmission work projects.

~~I do not believe this restriction impacts our real-time operator-to-operator communications between control rooms related to managing the reliability and safety of the gas and electric system.~~

Thank you for your understanding.
