

From: Cherry, Brian K
Sent: 10/3/2011 2:10:04 PM
To: 'Clanon, Paul' (paul.clanon@cpuc.ca.gov); Michelle Cooke (michelle.cooke@cpuc.ca.gov)
Cc:
Bcc:
Subject: RE: Oh boy!

People smell gas everywhere these days.

From: Clanon, Paul [mailto:paul.clanon@cpuc.ca.gov]
Sent: Monday, October 03, 2011 2:05 PM
To: Cherry, Brian K; Michelle Cooke
Subject: Oh boy!

Gas scare over, Lowell High students back in class

Jill Tucker, Chronicle Staff Writer

Monday, October 3, 2011

(10-03) 13:26 PDT SAN FRANCISCO -- Students at San Francisco's Lowell High School are back in class after being evacuated this morning in response to a "light" gas smell at the campus, school district officials said.

All students were evacuated safely from the school at 1101 Eucalyptus Drive at about 11:15 a.m. as administrators called Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

District and PG&E officials conducted a safety check using "sophisticated leak-detection equipment," said PG&E spokesman Joe Molica.

No gas leak was found and the smell dissipated. Students returned to class at about 12:15 p.m.

E-mail Jill Tucker at jtucker@sfchronicle.com.

<http://sfgate.com/cgi-bin/article.cgi?f=/c/a/2011/10/03/BAGN1LCQUT.DTL>

© 2011 Hearst Communications Inc. | Privacy Policy | Feedback | RSS Feeds | FAQ | Site Index | Contact