David, John, I'm looking forward to tomorrow's meeting (regarding that information-only letter about new non-tariffed products and services); however, someone in that happy meeting has a conflict that would be resolved by pushing it forward an hour, if possible. It's a medical issue, and as I age I am becoming increasingly sympathetic. How much of a burden would this put on you? I know it's eating into your personal time, as it's now starting at 4:00, but if it's possible I'd be grateful. Lemme know. Jack
