ROFL!!!! What I find myself doing is thinking that people that are my age are way too young to hold positions of importance. For example, the judge that is supposed to hear the Trayvon case is 39 and when I read that I thought, "Wow, she is way too young to be a judge." I think I'm trying to make myself feel better about not having accomplished more at my age. Is that a sign of a mid-life crisis?? :)

Apparently Andrew McAllister (CEC appointment) is 46. This is an illustration that I am getting older, because I think  $46 = 12$ .
