Okay. For purposes of substantive discussions, those can only start when all parties are ready to engage, and I'm understanding that may be after 4/23. I am amenable to the process conversation occurring on 4/20 that but just can't tell whether all are, but it isn't clear until you ask. I could ask that question of the entity that presented the concerns with 4/20 to me and feel that out if that would be helpful, let me know. For me week of 4/23 will be hard. General Hagan starts on 4/23 so I will have conflicts on 4/23, morning of 4/24, all day 4/25 and 26, and much of 4/27. Following week is somewhat better.

We're noodling on it - we have a bunch of key folks out this week and all of us won't be able to get together until tomorrow morning to discuss. Prelim thinking is that there is a preference for keeping the 20th but we can move to the 24th if the rest of the parties feel strongly about moving. I was thinking maybe it would still be good to get together on the 20th to cover some of the "process/goals/confidentiality" preliminary types of things -- we have had those discussions w/ CPSD but not the other parties. That way, whenever we actually get together to talk substance we could dive right into substance -- and it was for "substantive" reasons that I understood one party wanted to defer, so this idea should theoretically work with their concerns. But I haven't raised that with my leadership yet. If you have any thoughts you want to share on this topic, I am all ears.

I've heard that 4/20 presents a problem for at least one party. Do you guys have alternate dates to suggest?
