Erik is bringing blueberry muffins -- he says he has first dibs on blueberries!
Really, you don't have to bring anything.

This sounds great, especially the casual part since Scott is going for a bike ride that morning and we may be a few min late. I won't bring a quiche then but will have to bring something, so may be blueberry scones. Promise they'll be good and they keep well too! Here is my cell just in case you need to contact me on Sun [Redacted]

This is fantastic news! Now more people are saying yes: Paul Clanon, without Therese; Jack and Marsha; Erik and Shellie; and Chris Smith and his fiancée Kayla -- he's the young colleague of mine from Austin who I think you met a few years back and now he just joined PG&E! Kayla is an architect, recent UT grad.

The concept here is that we get to eat and relax in Redacted beautiful yard. She has a pool, and great hills behind the house if anybody feels up to a hike.

Redacted

Very casual!

We are going to make an egg casserole thing and chicken and sage sausage. I think Jack will bring a salad, and Redacted is making some kind of spinach thing as well as a fruit tart. I actually think we're covered with food! Just bring Scott!

11:00. Stay as little or long as your guest schedule permits.

I'm very happy you can do this.

Would love to come. It'll be just the two of us since we are not sure how tired our Norwegian guests will be. Please let me know where and also what I can bring. I make a pretty good mushroom and kale quiche! Looking forward to seeing you and Larry.
