Tell Chris to be careful. We hear he carries his wallet in one sock and his gun in the other. Seriously.

I love hearing from you, always.

I meant next week – gosh, what is with me?? But Thursday the 28th would work, I think. Now I can't remember which days Larry is meeting the students in SF . . . I'll check and get back. I'm interested in your communication class and remember you mentioned you were going to do it. Good for you!

Can't wait to hear what Rich said – he is one strange guy. But NOT as strange as the General. Here's my latest one, just for you: Hagan is insisting on meeting with Chris Johns one on one. OK fine. We offered 4:00 today at the CPUC. No, says Hagan, I want an "informal meeting" – lunch, dinner or drinks. Several more exchanges, then he settles on a drink today at 4:00 down here (Americano). Chris is in board meetings today. He has one hour. Hagan has Aaron Pete ask what Chris likes to drink. Answer is that Chris' assistant isn't sure, perhaps a glass of wine or, more likely, a diet Pepsi. Hagan persists. Asks again and gets same answer. Last night asks if Chris likes red or white wine . . . Assistant provides the same answer but can't predict what Chris might want. So the whole thing, we speculate, is that Hagan wants to be there ahead of time with "the drink" already waiting to show just how good his intelligence is and so they can talk "general to president".

Oh my. Do you think Paul has any idea what he's done??

Yes, good for Trina. I think that was the right call compared to the other option.

For dinner, did you mean July or June? Because I think July 27 is actually a Friday. June 27 is next week, and unfortunately won't work. We are taking a "same-sex couples communication" class at Kaiser (only in the Bay Area!) on Wednesday nights through July 18. Thursday could work, if that's an option. We are off (not working) tomorrow and Friday, but I'll still answer emails from you!

Funny you should email, Terrie and I were just talking about you today. I was telling her about a funny comment I got about you from Rich Clark (funniest if told in person, most likely, though that makes it sound important and it's not, just funny). And there are more "general" stories all the time, too. I still haven't met him, and probably won't. I'm so unimportant these days!

How about dinner on Wednesday July 27? Larry teaches Monday, wed, and thurs so I thought I could drive over, pick him up, meet up with you guys. You get the idea.

Regulatory Relations Employees:

I'm very pleased to announce that Trina Horner was elected today by the PG&E

Boards of Directors to become Vice President, Regulatory Proceedings and Rates. Trina takes on the position previously held by Jane Yura, who moved to Gas Operations last year to become Vice President, Gas Operations Standards and Policy.

Trina brings to her new role an impressive array of talents and skills acquired over more than 20 years in the utility industry.

For the past two years, she led the organization in Regulation and Rates responsible for managing several key rate cases, including ERRA Forecast and Compliance, the Long Term Procurement Plan and new generation facilities. She also served as the company liaison with the CPUC on a number of high-profile gas issues following the tragedy in San Bruno. Prior to that, she held the position of Chief in Regulatory Relations, where she met frequently with CPUC commissioners and senior staff to discuss key policy issues.

Before joining PG&E, Trina spent two years with the East Bay Municipal Water District in Oakland. Among her duties were designing rates, guiding strategic planning efforts, and developing budget proposals for senior management. She also served as the agency's Interim Environmental Affairs Officer.

Prior to that, she spent 13 years at the CPUC, including stints as Interim Division Director, Commissioner Advisor, and Chief of Staff to the CPUC's President.

Each of these experiences helped Trina develop the values and traits that make her the excellent leader she is today. She's thoughtful, knowledgeable, and consistently exercises sound judgment. She also thinks strategically, and has a clear vision of where to go and how to get there. And to those of us who know her personally and professionally, she's extremely honest and has a sincere concern and respect for others.

Trina earned her Bachelor's Degree in International Relations, with a Finance emphasis, from the University of California, Davis.

Before closing, I want to recognize and thank another outstanding leader, Brian Cherry, for the excellent work he did managing Regulation & Rates for most of the past year. During this particularly challenging time, Brian not only helped deliver solid outcomes for the company on a number of key cases but he also led Regulation and Rates to its highest-ever score in employee engagement.

I hope you will join me in congratulating Trina on her new appointment and thanking Brian for his excellent work over the past year.

Tom
