Subject: RE: RE: Notification of Update to CCA Webpage

Manisha,

Thank you for your email. We are aware that the Residential and Business Non Generation Rates still show an effective date of March 1, 2012. We are in the process of updating these and will let you know when they are completed.

The Residential Rates Example Graph found on the home page of the Community Choice Aggregation webpage has been updated and shows an effective date of July 1, 2012. The following is the link to the home page.

Elaine

I am in the process of reviewing the FAQs document and will soon get back to you on that, but in the meantime I wanted to share an observation with you. There are links in the FAQs and the main CCA webpages regarding Residential and Business Non Generation Rates that need updating to show rates effective July 1, 2012.

Gurbux and Carlos

Per Resolution E-4250, we are providing contemporaneous notification of an update to PG&E's CCA webpage. We are updating the Frequently Asked Questions section of the CCA webpage. We have made wording changes to many of the responses to the frequently asked questions to make more clear the answers to the questions. In addition, under the Billing and Rates section of the Frequently Asked Questions, we have added questions and answers in regards to the residential generation and distribution rate flattening and the Conservation Incentive Adjustment.

The following links will take you to the CCA webpage and the Frequently Asked Questions:
