Subject: Line 131-30 Follow-up Questions (Provided pursuant to PUC 583)

Sunil

In connection with our application to restore pressure on Line 131-30, you asked two follow-up questions regarding former Canus weld inspector [Redacted]

1. In a previous data response, PG&E had stated:

PG&E Construction Management surveyed several other PG&E and contractor employees who worked with [Redacted] and none of the people surveyed reported any discussions with [Redacted] regarding weld quality or recommendations.

You asked for the names of the individuals interviewed for this response.

2. Was any other contract weld inspector released for cause similar to [Redacted]? If so, who and under what circumstances?

Response 1:

As described in the attached email from GC Construction Supervisor [Redacted] the following five Canus Construction Coordination Supervisors reported no discussions with [Redacted] regarding weld quality or recommendations:

[Redacted] interviewed: [Redacted]

[Redacted]

Pierre Bigras interviewed: [Redacted]

The PG&E crew on site with [Redacted] during the subject welding included:

[Redacted] Supervisor

[Redacted] Welder

[Redacted] Welder

[Redacted] GC Utility Worker

[Redacted] Equipment Operator

[Redacted] Equipment Operator

[Redacted] reported that he and [Redacted] had approached [Redacted] one time to inquire about his silver-colored hard hat (not approved for PG&E workers). [Redacted] said that he had seen a similar type hard hat on television. [Redacted] described the program as "Storage Wars" where buyers compete to purchase the contents of abandoned storage lockers). [Redacted] said that while Canus inspectors were often on site when his crew was working, he insisted that no one talk directly to anyone on his crew and that all communication go through him. He said that the only conversation with [Redacted] was with regard to his unique hard hat.

Response 2:

As discussed, on Tuesday PG&E received the following email with attached "Non-Hire List" from Canus.
