Subject: help getting the word out

Hi there, when I asked for help in getting the word out regarding the enbanc, what I was hoping for was that your media or communications departments might have a database of people that you had compiled from the various list serves of relevant proceedings that you might be able to send out information to. Our lawyers thought that sending out a message to some listserves and not others might cause a problem under Bagely-Keene. I don't pretend to understand the conflict entirely, but it had to do with only "noticing" some parties and not others and discrimination, blah blah. But my thought was that you guys would not have a similar problem.

I'm grateful that some calls were made to relevant groups, but I fear we are still not going to get the numbers that we had hoped for. Is there anything you can send out at this point?

Thanks, Kristin.
