Hi Laura,
Thanks for writing me. Paul agreed to have an informational interview with her. If she's bright, He'll send her to talk to HR. I'm meeting with her to let her know about the exam.

Cheers,

Therese

I'm not sure Irina understands that she needs to approach the cpuc directly and take an exam. Therese, I assume she understands that I can't help her with that, but I hope you will clarify. Copying paul as he likely will add some direction.

When I talked with irina last night she was very disheartened by her inability to even get an interview with a public entity. She just keeps applying online and nothing happens. That's when I thought the cpuc process might work better for her. She could take the exam, presumably pass, and get in the pipeline.

Hi Laura,

It was a pleasure meeting you on Wednesday. Your introduction and explanation of your career opened my eyes to another side of the MPA. Throughout this program, I realized I wanted to gear my career towards a field that is pragmatic. My broad career options included the health care and the

IT industry in relation to public administration (of course). Hearing the story of your career was like a light bulb over my head, a whole other field to consider - gas and energy! I truly appreciate the time you took in speaking to my class and your presentation came at such a convenient time since I am seeking a job and was looking at careers at PG&E that day.

Therese emailed me this evening and stated that there may be a position with the California Public Utilities Commission which you believe I may be interested in. I am overjoyed and thankful that you took the time to recommend me. I've attached my resume in case you need it. I would greatly appreciate keeping in touch with you to receive any advice from you in relation to my career search.

Once again, thank you,
Irina
