Subject: RE: R.12-03-014 - Technical Comments on Proposed Scenarios

Hello all,

WEM supports this request for extension of time.

Barbara

Good morning, Nat, Kevin and parties of R. 12-03-014,

In light of the fact that the template for the technical comments was sent at the end of the day last Friday and the RPS calculator was posted the day before yesterday, the Clean Coalition respectfully requests an extension of time for parties to submit technical comments on the scenarios until Wednesday, September 12th. This should give parties sufficient time to review the materials and give efficient feedback.

Best regards,

Small solar photovoltaic (behind the meter)

The impacts of initiatives, such as the California solar initiative, are embedded in the CED forecast. This adjustment to a forecast would reflect further expansion of behind the meter programs, as separate from systems located on the distribution system or connected to the transmission system. Small photovoltaic are defined as up to 5 MW in AC nameplate capacity. The incremental values for the mid and high assumptions are reflective of the increase in Net Energy Metering (NEM) from D.12-05-036.

Pushkar and R.12-03-014,

Yes, that is correct. Also, the current version of the 33% RPS Calculator is now posted here:

I apologize for the delay in posting the 33% RPS Calculator.

Thanks,

Energy Division Staff & Parties to R.12-03-14:

This reverses schedule that was presented on August 24th Workshop (Presentation Slide # 6: Schedule - Track 2). Please confirm that the parties are now expected to comment only on the "Technical" questions posed by the CPUC ED by 09/07; and that the Policy comments that were earlier due 09/07 are now due 10/01. Also, in order to responsibly provide comments on the 33% RPS calculator as requested by ED in the list of questions, please post the latest version of the calculator at your earliest.

Thanks.

Dear R.12-03-014,

Energy Division staff requests technical comments on the proposed scenarios and sensitivities (collectively, "proposed scenarios") discussed during the 8/24 workshop. Staff asks that parties refer to the attached document, "Key Technical Questions for Parties in Response to Energy Division Proposed Scenarios for Use in the 2012 LTPP (R.12-03-014)," in preparing comments. These technical comments will not be in the record of the proceeding, but will be used to inform a revised staff proposal. The comments should be emailed to the service list on or before 9/7 and should be limited to two pages of text, not counting any supporting spreadsheets or tables. Staff anticipates that the revised staff proposal will be published on approximately 9/14. Policy comments, on the record, are due on 10/1.

For your reference, please find the Scenario Matrix, Scenario

Tool (requires MS Excel version 2007 or later), and the 8/24 workshop PowerPoint presentation located on the Long-Term Procurement Plan History web page. Note that Energy Division staff will post the revised RPS calculator to this web page once available.
