Yep, I bet that was it. Or, you may have saw the one who broke the World Record in Massachusetts - it was over 2,000 pounds!

Typically the big ones are put on display and then they sell the seeds.

A 1775 lb pumpkin?!?!

I think this is the one I saw on CBS Sunday morning this week? Or at least it's cousin.

What do they do with them once they are done with the competition?

Yes – unlike most of our other folks! How's the Halloween planning going?

I'm really sorry to hear that.

I thought Roger was a breath of fresh air too. Not so "corporate".

You two are so funny!

The “family circumstance,” as I understand it, is a very, very critical health condition for his daughter-in-law – cancer with lots of complications. They are a close family (always hard for me to imagine) and so they are coming together to deal with this.

I’m sad about that. But I’m also sad for PG&E because I think Roger was making a difference in the way we communicate with the world and I’m afraid we’ll go all medieval again after he leaves.

Not immediately, but soon. I’m very sad.

Subject: Corporate Affairs Organization Update

PG&E Officer and Director Team:

During the past year, many of you have gotten to know and worked directly with Roger Frizzell, PG&E's Chief Communications Officer and VP of Corporate Relations. Roger has been instrumental in beginning the process of rebuilding the company's reputation with customers and the greater public. He has led the development of a comprehensive brand strategy that is building greater awareness among the public about how the company is delivering on its commitment to provide Safe, Reliable and Affordable gas and electric service. And he and his team are making significant strides to assure the company achieves fairer and more balanced coverage in the media.

When PG&E lured Roger away from American Airlines in Dallas, TX, we (and he) expected that he would be our Chief Communications Officer for the long future. Roger shared with us earlier this week that family circumstance will necessitate his departure from PG&E in the coming months. Roger will be with us through the end of the year and we hope into early next year, and we are conducting a nationwide search to fill the position of Chief Communications Officer for PG&E.

Please feel free to reach out to Roger and offer your best wishes as he plans for the next stage of his career.

Greg
