Colleagues:

I'm pleased to share that PG&E has been recognized by the National Conference on Citizenship and Points of Light, the nation's definitive experts on civic engagement, as one of the top 50 companies in the first comprehensive ranking of S&P 500 companies that best use their community investment and employee volunteer programs to improve the quality of life in the communities where they do business.

As shared through Bloomberg BusinessWeek today, PG&E ranked 21st, making us the top regional company recognized in the rankings and the only gas and electric utility represented on the list. The top 20 includes multinational and national companies such as IBM, General Electric and Target.

Please share with your teams as appropriate. We will also be sharing our good news through a press release, a story on Currents and on the Intranet tomorrow, as well as through our social media channels. Here is a link to the list for your reference: <http://www.ncoc.net/TheCivic50-release>

Thanks for all that you and your teams are doing to position PG&E as a top corporate citizen nationally.

Ezra
