Hi Bill,

I spoke with Manho and his team this afternoon about the information regarding Moraga Potrero (M-P) that has been presented publicly. They directed me to the CAISO September workshops focused on reliability projects. Our presentation related to M-P from that public meeting is attached and a link to the other presentations is below.

However, we know that the comments you have due at the end of this month are related to the December workshops where the scope included renewable and economic projects (which is why M-P wasn't discussed in that deck). So it probably makes most sense to hold off on commenting on M-P until the draft plan comes out next month. Additionally, a good way to discuss the need associated with M-P is to note that SF is reliant on AC imports coming up the peninsula and the need to diversify this (in contrast to calling out Martin specifically).

Thanks for all the good questions! I'll be out of the office next week, but back the following week. Happy holidays.

Best,
Kate

Kate,

Yes, thanks for sending the particular reliability results file dealing with this issue, and pointing out the row.

I may have more questions. We are looking at it.

Best regards,

Bill

Bill,

Attached is a table from an October CAISO report that categorizes the Martin issue as D8 with the potential mitigation options as “under review”. Here’s a link to that information as well. Let me know if this is what you were looking for per our conversation after the meeting.
