I see the usefulness of what you are thinking, but I also want to be careful not to be too PG&E-centric in the first few months. 1.5 days would be a lot of time to spend off-site with only one utility. Maybe we could do the gas one in April or May?

Ah ha! Figures. No need to ask then . . .

We talked this afternoon about Carla's visit to PG&E. There are always scheduling challenges around getting all the "right " people together. I'm proposing that her first visit (March 12 I think?) NOT include gas because the gas guys have a conflict. There is plenty to talk about that day anyway. But then I'd like to schedule a visit out to the new gas campus at Bishop Ranch (San Ramon) where she could meet the team, see the new "open office" setup, the new gas control center that's under construction. Probably take a half day. I think it would be more interesting than having talking heads here at 77 Beale.

Does that sound reasonable?

I will ask and get back to you. But to be honest, that Peevey comment was out of left field. There was no discussion with us, so I think it was an excuse (for what, I don't know at all).

Just throwing this out and you can TOTALLY say no – but if Carla has any interest in hearing the PG&E “on the ground” perspective on contractor dig-ins and what our experience is, I could get Jesus Soto over for a 20 minute briefing. Jesus is the newish Sr VP in Gas Ops and he's been very engaged about this issue. We have some data.

Just occurred to me when Mike said he was holding that leg item and wanted Carla to have more time to get up to speed.
