Subject: Re: REMINDER - Conference Call To Review Joint IOU Rates Customer Survey
for RROIR, Thursday January 31, 2013

Sorry I've had to break up this email because of the number of recipients.

This ended up scheduled during a workshop on DG issues at the PUC (January 31, 2013
9:30 am – 4:30 pm: Renewable Distributed Generation (ALL technologies) Technical Potential – Methodologies and Assumptions (Black and Veach/E3 sub) contract.), but time permitting I will join the call.

I feel like it would be helpful to ask if respondents would prefer a rate mechanism that provides a bonus/payment/bill credit if they can shift their average load off of peak (or perhaps if they can "use less electricity during the middle of day than they do during the rest of the day") with no penalty if they do not succeed in doing so. The questions in sections 3 don't seem to get there. While such a mechanism could be argued to be a rate structure, it's not clear that it isn't a potential element of multiple rate structures.
Regardless of that subtlety, I fear we are limiting the range of rate structures that can be considered here by excluding this kind of question in the survey.

I think this is distinct from time of use, because it provides an explicit reward for changing load profiles leaving rate structures free to remain the same or change if it becomes preferable to do so. But clearly it's not a DR program or rate either because it's not peak day focused. That does present a problem about how it would be integrated into the structure you've presented here - perhaps it fits better in question 2, but unfortunately people will not have had the benefit of understanding tier structures, etc. before hand if placed there.

Thanks for the consideration,

Aram Shumavon

Good points. The same could be said about positive bill savings from switching from flat rates to TOU, absent any change in customers usage. If don't provide customer information about potential bill impacts, they may think a rate such as TOU increases their bill when it fact it lowers it. It cuts both ways, but depends on the individual customer, their occupancy schedule, usage habits, and appliances/equipment at that particular home. A key challenge with choice surveys is that once the dollar impacts are presented, it tends to dominate all other attributes.

Subject: Re: REMINDER - Conference Call To Review Joint IOU Rates Customer
Survey for RROIR, Thursday January 31, 2013

Two general comments/questions prior to tomorrow.

First – Why do the choice screens not provide exemplary monthly bills for the different rate structures, perhaps with and without load shifting? The presentation is structured and worded so that customers who think they can 'shift' usage would be led to believe they will 'save' money on any TOU rate, and would thus likely choose the TOU rate. But I do not see any explanation that if they 'cannot' shift, the total bill could increase under TOU relative to flat or tiered. This seems a biased result. I think the conjoint choices should include some information re. relative bill impacts, otherwise people are just guessing. And in fact, they are not guessing since it is impossible for them to conclude anything about their bills from the actual choices. Their choice will thus be entirely driven by their reaction to the description of the different rate types. This description ignores any possible negative relative bill impacts of TOU v. flat v. tiered.

Second, I am concerned about the stability/low bill tradeoff issue. There is only one subquestion addressing the desirability of 'stability.' There is no information (or I missed it) on how different tiered rates or TOU rates might impact monthly bill volatility. There is significant market research (and actual market data) showing customers strongly value monthly bill stability. How is this incorporated into the survey?

Subject: REMINDER - Conference Call To Review Joint IOU
Rates Customer Survey for RROIR, Thursday January 31, 2013

This is a reminder about the Conference Call this Thursday to review the Joint IOU Rates Customer survey that is being deployed in support of the Residential Rates OIR. Please disregard this message if you have already declined the meeting notice.

If you are planning on attending, we expect that you will have already reviewed the attached documents, which were provided in the meeting notice (attached) as we will not have time to review them in detail in the meeting:

1. Current Draft of Customer Survey (word doc)
2. Example choice set screens referred to in section 4 of survey (powerpoint doc)
3. Example "outputs" from the actual conjoint analysis that will be conducted with the data gathered by the survey (powerpoint doc)
4. A list of the questions that came up in the webinar last month on December 19th and how we have addressed them (word doc - Customer Survey Discussion Topics).

We will also be sending a powerpoint document with agenda
and survey objectives Thursday morning.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

I have also included the meeting coordinates below:
