Matthew –

See Redacted note below. Note that PDP (peak-day pricing, our name for CPP plus TOU), is a add-on rate, and sits on top of the TOU rate they are on. So, when they opt out, they go either to the TOU rate, or to a DR program.

Let me know if you have more questions about this. 973-5921.

yours, sid

Hi Sid,

Redact confirmed the following stats (Thank you Redact). It's important to note that these counts represent active accounts only, and do not include those accounts that are now closed. I can get those stats if you feel it offers a more complete picture.

Counts are for service agreements, and not individual customers (that will be lower) through January month end:

5,876 current participating SAs on PDP (63% of eligible)

1,408 are Large C&I,

201 are Medium C&I,

4,112 are Small C&I (mostly Comcast billboards & AT&T),

110 are Large Ag,

21 are Medium Ag and

24 are Small Ag.

Of these 5,876, 1,055 were automatically defaulted and another 4,819 optionally enrolled or affirmed/acknowledged their impending default.

Yes – customers can opt-out of PDP at any time without penalty.

Of the 9,393 active Service Agreements eligible for transition to PDP, 3,432 (37%) are now “inactive” on PDP with 23% having opted out, 13% having unenrolled post transition and 1% being disqualified for PDP (due to net metering, DA or incompatible DR Program).

Large = >200kW

Med = >75 kW but less than 200kW

Small =<75 kW

Matthew - I will turn this over to Sid for follow up internally.

Sid - see if we can get Matt the information sooner rather than later.

Hi Brian,

I have a (yet to be focused) question for PG&E. Hopefully you can help me focus the question and then work with you team to get me a bit of data.

We understand that some of your large customers are currently on CPP. Which customers are those (customer class)? How many of them are there? Do they have an “opt out” option and if so, what percentage of them have elected to exercise that option? What rate structure do they shift to if they opt out of CPP?

Thank you,

Matthew
