This place sounds good to me. As long as we get a table. You know my no-booth rule. Especially for six people. We're not sardines. ☺

August 4 is great for us. Here is the web site for the french place we love (it's sort of French/Italian fusion):

<http://www.nizzalabella.com/>

Brunch is any time 11-3 and it is often not too crowded, but I'd make a reservation just in case. Larry should like it because we've noticed their bar stocks Boodles gin (though we have not sampled it ourselves). It's a little local funky place, but it's our current favorite (current= at least 2 years and we go there almost every week at some point).

But we are always open to other places, too.

I LOVE THIS IDEA!!!

July 28 doesn't work for us, but August 4 does, and I say let's shoot for that so we have some backup if need be. I think August 11 will be Larry's last Sunday here ... can't believe how fast it goes. But of course I can't believe most things these days.

And I like the idea of French – don't care about view. We can go anywhere of course.

Subject: brunch for six?

Hi Laura,

Terrie and I have just been emailing about the idea of getting the six of us (three on this email plus our significant others) together for brunch some weekend before Larry goes back to Texas for the Fall. Pam and I are free July 28, August 4, and then any other Saturday or Sunday in August. There are a couple of east bay options, some with views, some with great food (unfortunately, not sure about places with both) where it might be in the middle between Concord and SF. Pam and I have a favorite French place with awesome food but no view, there's always Skates in Berkeley, or there's a new place on the Richmond marina near us that Terrie just found a review of (called "assemble"). Anyway, let us know if this is an idea of interest and if there's a date that might work.

Julie
