

From: Fitch, Julie A.
Sent: 8/7/2013 11:28:59 AM
To: Doll, Laura (/O=PG&E/OU=CORPORATE/CN=RECIPIENTS/CN=LRDD)
Cc:
Bcc:
Subject: Re: AWWEE again

I am sitting in a boring meeting so no worries. I think Carla would be totally fine with this approach. I can run it by her if you like but she is somewhat off the grid until late Thursday...

Julie

Sent from my iPhone

On Aug 7, 2013, at 11:22 AM, "Doll, Laura" <LRDD@pge.com> wrote:

I really understand you have way more important things to think about . . . but would you take a quick look at this and see if Carla might be comfortable with it? The SF AWWEE team, young and bright women, are far more anxious than I in knowing what Carla may talk about!

I put this together to help them.

Join us for an informal discussion about California energy and water issues with the newest California PUC Commissioner and the first-ever African-American woman to serve on both the Energy Commission and the CPUC.

Perhaps start at the high level:

- What are the key state energy and water issues where you think the CPUC can make a difference in the next 5 years?
- Which are you most optimistic about? How about the gnarliest?
- Compare and contrast CEC vs CPUC roles? Give an example of an issue that both commissions have a role in and how they differ? Cultural differences between Sacramento and San Francisco?
- What has surprised you the most so far at the Commission?

And then get personal:

- Was your path to public service deliberate or accidental?
- How does a nice Rhodes Scholar like you end up at the CPUC? How did you deal with the cultural differences at Oxford?
- Lean In has prompted a lot of workplace discussion about gender bias. As an African American woman who has worked in a variety of workplaces, can you share any of your own observations?
- The volume of activity – and documents to read and meetings to attend – at the CPUC is overwhelming. How do you deal with that and stay sane?

From: Fitch, Julie A. [mailto:julie.fitch@cpuc.ca.gov]
Sent: Wednesday, August 07, 2013 11:15 AM
To: Doll, Laura
Subject: Re: more questions

I don't know. Could research...

Sent from my iPhone

On Aug 7, 2013, at 11:06 AM, "Doll, Laura" <LRDD@pge.com> wrote:

Is Carla the youngest woman ever appointed to the CPUC, do you know?

PG&E is committed to protecting our customers' privacy.
To learn more, please visit
<http://www.pge.com/about/company/privacy/customer/>

PG&E is committed to protecting our customers' privacy.
To learn more, please visit
<http://www.pge.com/about/company/privacy/customer/>