Heh. It's harder to get a second-line band around here than you'd think. It's really sad, though, the idea that so many persons venerate the dead even when the dead aren't that great. It's easy to make fun of the whole 'trophies for participation' thing going on with kids, but adults are just as bad or worse. The middle class has so many trophies it could hand more than one to each person.

I think you should recommend PG&E sponsor a big memorial. As a celebration of her life, I recommend a New Orleans traditional Second Line marching band.

FYI - Women's Energy Matters ("WEM") is requesting 90 days to file complete an intervenor compensation claim for the EE 2013-2014 proceeding as Barbara George, Executive Director of WEM, passed away November 7, 2013.
