All Prime Supplier Program training materials have been updated to include guidelines regarding accurate reporting and documentation of diverse subcontracting. The following letter was also recently communicated to all prime suppliers to highlight these reporting guidelines.

Gun Shim
Vice President, Supply Chain
P.O. Box 770000

Dear Supplier,

For more than three decades, PG&E has been committed to creating a robust Supplier Diversity Program. In 2012, we reached a tremendous milestone by spending over $2.0 billion with Diverse Business Enterprises (DBEs), representing 38.8 percent of PG&E's total procurement spend. Our prime suppliers reported a collective $610 million in subcontracting with DBEs last year and we expect you to continue to grow your supplier diversity programs alongside PG&E.

As you prepare and finalize your 2013 reports to PG&E on supplier diversity subcontracting, I want to remind you that accuracy of reported DBE subcontracting dollars is critical. I also urge you, whenever possible, to make subcontractor payments in the year the work was completed and report those payments within the calendar year that PG&E pays you for the related goods and services. In preparing your reports, please make sure to adhere to the following guidelines:

- Reported subcontracting dollars must be directly related to PG&E work.
- Reported subcontracting dollars must reflect payments made to suppliers, net of any voided transactions, estimates, early payment discounts, markups, etc.
- Records to document your subcontracting dollars must be kept for a period of three years. These records should clearly document that the work performed was for PG&E and that payment was made to the subcontractor.

PG&E's Prime Supplier Program (PSP) establishes and maintains a subcontracting program for purchases/contracts exceeding $500,000. PG&E's Prime Supplier Guide is designed to provide you with tools to develop a successful supplier diversity program and accurately report your subcontracting successes to PG&E. This guide can be found at the following link:

PG&E also conducts monthly Prime Supplier Training Webinars, held on the first Tuesday of each month. You are invited to participate in any of these webinars to advance your understanding of the Prime Supplier Program, including reporting requirements. Details are attached to this letter.

Should you have any questions, please contact our Prime Supplier Program Manager, [Redacted], at [Redacted]. We look forward to continuing our work together to support the growth of diverse businesses and the economic vitality of the communities that PG&E serves.

Sincerely,

Gun Shim
