That's a tough one. Huckleberry is very pretty, but quite narrow with manzanita. I've only ridden it once on a cold and frosty morning when I wouldn't meet any hikers.

On my way to cpuc meeting. You?

Thorny is good. I would want to name huckleberry as bramble.

I know who it is. It's my college dorm roommate. He named all his segments with a sex themes that play on the actual trail name. So "golden spike trail" becomes golden showers. Gramm trail becomes g-spot, etc.

I prefer names that relate, but also have some character, like a sketchy technical trail names "wild rose" I dubbed "thorny" on strava

HaHa!
