Subject: A question re shareholder vs ratepayer funded personnel costs

With the advent of new players in the market such as CCAs and DA, we are many times asked a question as to which personnel costs are included in ratepayer funded revenue requirement and which ones are paid for by shareholders. A more specific question out there is as to how lobbying staff costs are distinguished from regulatory affair staff costs who may also be engaging in lobbying. I understand lobbying costs are funded by shareholders. Please provide a clear definition of the bright line that divides the two. Please feel free to give me a call if you have questions. Could I have this response by the end of the week? Thanks.
