Oh, they are all DIFFERENT!

I think I know of the Army ranger one from watching "generation kill" on teevee. No R in that one.

I really only know what Wikipedia told me. I think the r is the key thing. In any case, I get so embarrassed for humanity whenever I hear one of these contrived war whoops that I nearly faint, so I am a bit unclear on the whole thing.

From Wikipedia:

Oorah is a battle cry common in the United States Marine Corps since the mid-20th century. It is comparable to hooah in the US Army and hooyah in the US Navy and US Coast Guard. It is most commonly used to respond to a verbal greeting or as an expression of enthusiasm.

Isn't oo-ah a ranger thing, not a Marines thing?

OOORAH!

Wikipedia told me that it's best spelled this way.
