Well, I think one of my fave ideas is that if you win, you should stop playing. But I think the amount we win actually matters here. Let's reassess after tomorrow's drawing.

And it's up to you on the scratcher. The grand prize for that one is 2000/week rather than 5000/week, but I have no idea if the odds are better or worse, and there was no Cantonese speaker standing there for me to ask.

Should I get five of the $2 scratcher version?

Maybe we should parlay small winnings (under $50?) back into more tickets until our $20 is gone? Or is that just lotto fever talking?

Okay, I went with 10 quick picks (I was surprised it wasn't kwik pik) in the mega millions (I think mega millions is either redundant or wrong). There were three games. One was 2 bucks per pick, and so I picked the 1 buck/pick game with the higher prize. I also bought a single lucky-life scratcher for 10 bucks. There was a 2 dollar version that I maybe should have gone with instead. But anyway, I got a 20 dollar prize on the scratcher. Of course, I didn't think about what we'd do with small winnings. I think I just give you 10 bucks.
