

My staff has received a number of emails from an individual who claims that PG&E's cross bore safety program has serious deficiencies. As I understand it, the program is supposed to discover where household gas lines were punched through other lines- typically sewer lines. If the two lines cross, the gas line may deteriorate and gas might then seep into a home through the sewer line, potentially leading to an explosion.