Oh, I appreciate that! You know, it's true. Apparently I'm the 1 in 1000 or so. I have to say that all the time b/c people always start giving me advice on some crazy non-calorie-based approach, and I say it to shut them up.

Actually, I hadn't noticed you getting thinner, just so's you know.

The metal tape measure did give me some empirical data that I am, indeed, a pencil-neck.

I went to a wedding on Saturday. A lot of folks from my cycling club there that I hadn't seen in a while (like Marty and Takumi). Everyone remarked on how skinny I was. It is funny, the process is so slow, it is hard to notice three months' change -- but it is noticeable to others. Takumi gave you props -- he noted that you were one of the few folks he's seen lose a significant chunk of weight and keep it off.

Yeah, you need one of the cloth/rubber ones. Three bucks, totally worth it.

I tried to use a metal tape measure. It wasn't very good.

I bought a new tape measure when I started this. My old one was stretched and wrong. Works great.

Nice. Congrats!

I bought some shirts online this week. I have to send them back. Too big. I don't know what size to get anymore, and my choices are more limited than before.

I'm staying at. 145#, but I keep getting leaner.
