Colleagues,

One of our employees in the General Office has come down with flu like symptoms and has been diagnosed with H1N1 flu. This employee was in on Monday June 30. This employee may have had close contact with employees in our work group. If anyone in your workgroup begins to feel ill, please follow the company's guidance as summarized in the following paragraph.

If you are experiencing flu-like symptoms—a fever of over 100 degrees, a sore throat and cough, runny or stuffy nose—I strongly encourage you to stay home and seek the advice of your physician, if necessary. At this time Workplace Health & Productivity advises that you should stay home until you are symptom free for 24 hours. This is consistent with guidance from the Center for Disease Control and Prevention and will protect your health and the health of your co-workers.

When at work, please do everything you can to stay healthy. Wash your hands frequently, especially before eating. For those of us who use public transit, hand washing after arriving at work and getting home is essential.

There is no reason to be alarmed or for anyone to panic, but I would rather inform our employees so they are aware of the situation so they can take the necessary precautions for themselves and their loved ones.

Please contact me if you have any additional questions.

Thank you,

Sujata
