

This KOP is located on Butterfield Ranch Road, just east of Chino Hills State Park, looking west across undeveloped lands and toward the eastern boundary of CHSP. This view is typical of the interface of developed lands to the east and undeveloped landscapes to the west, with grass covered rolling hills that are currently undeveloped. Existing 220-kV and 500-kV double circuit transmission lines are very visible on the skyline ridges in the foreground. (The existing view from KOP-South-25 would not change under Routes A or C of Alternative 4.)

Overall Visual Sensitivity: high. For travelers on Butterfield Ranch Road in general and KOP-South-25 specifically, the moderate-to-high viewer exposure, high viewer concern, and high visual quality lead to a high overall visual sensitivity of the visual setting and viewing characteristics.

Figure A-61a
Existing Conditions
for KOP-South-25
Butterfield Ranch Road,
Chino Hills (Alternative 4,
Routes A, B, C, & D,
Segment 8A)

Source: Lee Anderson, 2008.